

Right Track Overseas Consultancy are working with Kissing it Better, a UK-based healthcare charity and training provider, to offer volunteering opportunities for all students considering a career in healthcare, public service or communications. Evidence shows that working with Kissing it Better improves students' confidence and soft skills, as well as giving young people the chance to enhance the lives of older people around the world.

Through a mix of highly interactive virtual learning, and virtual visits to care homes, Kissing it Better's teaching and volunteering packages give unique insight into the care of vulnerable people in hospitals and residential homes, as well as those living in their own homes. As the risks linked to connecting with people face-to-face begin to ease in some countries, Kissing it Better is now beginning to create events within the grounds of some residential homes, ensuring at all times that the guidelines linked to that setting are always observed.

Kissing it Better has an excellent reputation with students from schools and colleges across the world, as well as staff at all levels within the NHS. In addition to a range of regulated and accredited courses, the charity has also developed their own ranges of courses, created to work virtually as well as face-to-face when regulations allow.

“Kissing it Better teaches students thinking skills & gives them a really meaningful volunteering experience. It’s absolutely brilliant & all of our students really enjoy it,”

Karen Mandeville, Deputy Director, City and Islington College.

“Honestly, working with KiB was the highlight of this lockdown

Sahib (student)

“Kissing It Better provides the sustained variety, established infrastructure, focused energy and inexorable drive to do what the majority of organisations know to be important but find difficult or impossible to do on their own,”

NHS England Report.